MAD DOG BITES TWO; ESCAPES 300 PURSUERS

CHINAMAN AND WOMAN, WHO RAN TO HIS AID, VICTIMS IN SOUTH BOSTON.

A mad dog which ran amuck to-day at the corner of L and Eighth streets and bit two persons is this afternoon running wild over South Boston, and his whereabouts is now a mystery.

At about 12 o'clock a fox terrier was seen by a crowd of boys to be snarling and snapping at objects in the street. His actions attracted a large number, and when the canine started to run down Eighth street he was chased by two or three hundred men and boys.

The mad brute dashed into the laundry of Sing Wah on the corner of L street and lunged at the proprietor, biting him on the finger.

Mrs. Mary McGrath of Worcester, who is visiting relatives at No. 518 Eighth street, bravely ran into the laundry to help the Chinaman. The dog leaped at her and also bit her on the finger. She was attended by Dr. Rockwood.

The crazed beast, after biting the woman, hurled itself into a tub of suds and jumped out again, then dashed out among the crowd in the street, snapping at the legs of everyone it passed.

Down the street fled the dog, again chased by reckless boys, and rushed into the stable of Sinclair Brothers, contractors, where B. F. Fleming of Chambers street made a desperate effort to stop it flight and capture it. The brute rushed out of the stable, however, and ran in among a number of houses, escaping its pursuers.

MAD BULL TERRIER BITES 20 PEOPLE AT CONEY ISLAND

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—A mad bull terrier ran wild on Coney Island Beach at the foot of West Twenty-second street today, biting two, a man and child, and scattering hundreds of bathers and some residents in every direction, and amply fighting two policemen, who finally put it into insensibility with clubs.

Several of those bitten were rescued, suffering from terrible lacerations, to the reception hospital at Coney Island.

Others had their wounds dressed by an ambulance surgeon and local physicians and went to their homes. The presence of mind of one man, William Powell, diverted the dog from the Seaside Home for Children, where hundreds of children were congregated in the playground.

ETHEL LEVEY HURT WITH MILLIONAIRE IN AN AUTO CRASH

Actress, Former Wife of George Cohan, and Son of Former Governor Higgins, of New York, Hurled from Machine When It Collided with Trolley Car—Miss Cora Levey Also Injured.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Frank H. Higgins, rich son of the late Governor Frank W. Higgins, with Ethel Levey, divorced wife of George M. Cohan and fiancee of Robert Edeson, the actor, and Ethel Levey's cousin, Cora Levey, were injured when Higgins's automobile crashed into a trolley car at Coney Island early to-day.

The car was practically destroyed. Ethel Levey could not be seen even by her friends after she was taken to her apartments in the Somona. Cora Levey was attended by physicians and suffered severely from cuts and bruises.

WERE AT LATE SUPPER.

Edeson introduced Higgins to his fancee. Higgins took the two Levey girls to Manhattan Beach last night to a late supper, and it was while returning shortly before dawn that the accident happened. The wheels of the automobile skidded, throwing it against the car.

Higgins said none of the occupants was thrown from the machine, but the police reported that all were hurled through the air.

Higgins's chauffeur was fined $10 yesterday for fast driving.

Ethel Levey created a sensation a few months ago by suing her husband, George M. Cohan, the actor-playwright, for a divorce, which she won and secured the custody of their daughter.

Later came the announcement that Miss Levey was engaged to Robert Edeson, and that they were to be married in Europe. Both went to London, and a few weeks ago they returned on the same steamer.

"ALL OVER," DECLARED EDESON.

Mr. Edeson, however, declared that "all was over between them," and since then their names have not been spoken of together.

Mr. Cohan later married Miss Agnes Nolan, formerly a member of his company. Ethel Levey went into vaudeville for a short time after she secured her divorce.

HOFFMAN GIVES UP DEER ISLAND POST SEPT. 1

Captain Frederick G. Hoffman to-day submitted to the BOSTON AMERICAN that he had given his resignation as master of the House of Correction, Deer Island, to Penal Commissioner John B. Martin, to take effect September 1.

The Captain, whose resignation has been in the hands of Mr. Martin for some time, leaves his post because of conflict with the Mayor's office. He wished to be in command in fact as well as in name, but did not take kindly to the interference of politicians.

Captain James R. Gerrish, his predecessor, also clashed with the city officials, it will be recalled, this also resulting in his being removed.

Commissioner Martin said to-day that it is too early as yet to predict whom he will choose as Captain Hoffman's successor. It is said around the corridors of City Hall, however, that Captain Gaskin of Station 2 is being again urged to fill the vacancy. The place, which pays $2,500 a year, was offered to him when Gerrish was ousted, but he declined on account.

Captain Hoffman is on the retired list as a police captain, with half pay, and his salary, who fixed at $1,250, that his compensation as master, together with his pension, might not exceed the salary of $2,500.

WOMAN SLEUTH AIDS ARREST

The clever detective work of Mrs. William Rooney of Paris street, wife of the well-known police inspector at headquarters, was responsible to-day for the capture of William Gunnerson, whom the police call the meanest crook they have seen in years.

Gunnerson, who is charged with fleecing Mrs. Anna Wie, an aged widow living at No. 1 2-3rds street, out of $5 and with stealing her furniture and other household effects worth $200, was to-day trailed to a saloon near Mrs. Wie's house by Mrs. Rooney. She notified Patrolmen Murray and Ramey, who arrested Gunnerson after a struggle.

Judge Barnes in the East Boston court held Gunnerson in $500.

MANSFIELD IS MUCH BETTER

NEW LONDON, Ct., Aug. 24.—Richard Mansfield, who is at his home in Pequot avenue, is considerably improved in health to-day, according to a statement by his brother Fells, who alone is authorized to speak of the actor's condition. He said:

"Richard has been walking about his cottage and inspecting the changes which have been made along the place since last September. Numerous friends have called upon him, and he chatted freely with them."

Plymouth Saved from Devastating Flames

FORESTS WIPED OUT

Rain Aids Desperate Volunteers After All Night Struggle to Save Homes.

PLYMOUTH, Aug. 24.—The two fierce forest fires, which have raged to the north and south of Plymouth for the past week, devastating nearly 2,000 acres, were finally brought under control early to-day after desperate efforts by the hundreds of volunteer fire-fighters, who were almost exhausted. The coming of rain aided in quenching the flames.

The town of Plymouth, with all its historic relics and landmarks, which at a late hour last night was in peril, is now believed to be safe, though a third fire has broken out from sparks driven south to the Bourne and Sandwich, on the neck of Cape Cod, to the south of here, is also under control, according to telephone dispatches.

Half a thousand men are still on duty here, fearing the wind will again fan the flames into fierce activity. The fire was checked shortly after midnight to-day, with the fire-fighters valiantly battling from the New Haven Railroad tracks, scattered along a distance of ten miles from Bourne, through Bournedale, Sagamore to Sandwich.

The danger to the towns of Sagamore and Sandwich, as well as to other small settlements through to Pocasset, is now practically past. In fact, in these sections there is little brush or wooded territory to be devastated.

Timber Land Devastated.

The flames were finally stopped by means of setting counter fires, which swept back to the main blaze, and met it where there was nothing to be burned.

Thousands of dollars worth of timber has been destroyed, as well as great quantities of hay and grain. Much of the ground devastated, however, was swamp land, left dry by the lack of rain.

Albert Haskell, fire warden of Plymouth county, has gone to Cedarville with a corps of volunteers to battle with the flames now raging there.

Resort to Counter Fires.

The men who have been fighting the flames in the Kingston woods, north of here, surrounded the burning area and by means of setting check fires stopped the progress of the flames. This was not until 1,400 acres had been burned over. Three hundred and fifty acres have also been laid waste about Darby Station, four miles to the southwest, though the village did not appear to be in peril from this side.

New Fires Break Out As Flaming Brands Are Driven About Brisk Wind.

VANNUTELLI TO ATTEND CHURCH CONGRESS HERE

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Plans are already well under way for the fourth eucharistic congress of the Roman Catholic church in America, to be held in Pittsburg on October 15, 16 and 17, under the temporary presidency of Cardinal Vincenzo Vannutelli, bishop of Palestrina, who will come to America early in October as a special representative of the Pope to the congress.

Mgr. Lavelle of St. Patrick's Cathedral here is authority for the statement that Cardinal Vannutelli will visit this country in the fall and attend the convention. Besides presiding over the congress at Pittsburg, Cardinal Vannutelli will visit Archbishop Farley and preach in St. Patrick's Cathedral, giving the papal benediction, as special representative of the Pope.

He will call on the President and will visit Cardinal Gibbons in Baltimore, besides making a tour of the larger cities of the United States.

CORTELYOU'S AID SUPRISE TO FINANCIERS

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Secretary Cortelyou's announcement of relief for the money situation took the financial community somewhat by surprise and resulted in a scurry of shorts to cover their contracts at the opening. As a result of this prices rose from liberal fractions to 2 per cent. in the more important issues. Cortelyou proposes to deposit immense sums of government money in national banks in New York, Boston and other big cities.

Among the influences operating against the market was a rumor that some large firm was in trouble. The early gains were entirely wiped out and losses ranging from 1 to 3 points from the top levels were recorded.

The market experienced a rally from 1 to 2 per cent., but closed with final quotations irregular, but generally lower. Governments unchanged; other bonds steady.

FIVE PERISH IN FIRE AT SOMERVILLE; ONE DYING

GRANDFATHER, MOTHER AND BABIES SUFFOCATED; BOY NEAR DEATH.

To-day little John Cooper, five-year-old son of Martin Cooper, is dying at the Somerville Hospital as the result of the fire which last night caused the death of his mother, grandfather and two sisters and a brother. His father, Martin, is given a chance for life in the predictions of Dr. Morse, who is in charge of the two cases at the hospital.

Charles Ruggles, who leaped from a window in the Cooper home, No. 440 Nor. Main street, Somerville, directly after the fire started at midnight, is held only in $1,000 bail, which has since been fixed at the Somerville police station for examination, was arraigned to-day in the Somerville police court on a charge of drunkenness, but the authorities being satisfied that the story he has told of the accidental origin of the fire is correct. He pleaded guilty and was fined $5 by Judge Wentworth.

Five Bodies in Morgue.

Medical Examiner Johnson, who took charge of the case in the absence of Medical Examiner Harrell, gave out his conclusion to-day that the five members of the Cooper family who are dead were accidentally killed by burning and asphyxiation. His investigation into the case is concluded, unless unforeseen evidence comes to light.

At the Brafferty undertaking rooms in Somerville lie the bodies of Mrs. Martin Cooper, her father, John Dwyer, and her three children, Margaret, William and Theresa, awaiting the call of their friends as to what disposition will be made of their remains.

The Cooper home was destroyed by the overturning of a lamp shortly before midnight, after all but Martin Cooper, the head of the household, and Ruggles, who was a visitor, had retired for the night.

Goldman Family Saved.

Abraham Goldman, with his family, consisting of his wife and five children, occupied the tenement above that of the Cooper family, and had a narrow escape with his life, while his family was near suffocating, awakened by the smell of smoke. Mrs. Goldman called her husband. On opening the door of their tenement, the father found that a brisk fire was burning below. Grabbing up two of his children from their beds, Mr. Goldman led the way to the street, followed by his eldest boy, and his wife, with the other two children in her embrace.

On the way down, Mr. Goldman pounded at the door of the Cooper tenement, but received no response, and, believing that the inmates had escaped safely, he continued to the street and did not know of the fatalities until informed by the police later.

With her pet "Teddy Bear" clasped tightly in her arms, a smile on her face, Ilsy Theresa was found, her little limbs already stiffening in death, when the firemen broke into the Cooper apartments at the close of an hour's fight with the fire, which at one time threatened the destruction of the nest of wooden buildings in which the tenement was located.

Carefully tucked into bed with her, the clothing arranged with motherly solicitude, were the bodies of Margaret, aged six, and William, aged three, all dead.

In another bed in the same room was the body of John Dwyer, aged sixty-three, father of Mrs. Cooper, around whose neck were clasped the arms of five-year-old John, the latter still living.

Mother Dead in Bed.

In another room, the mother lay dead in bed, while the father lay on the floor where he had fallen in his rush to inform his wife of the peril which threatened the lives of herself and her little ones.

Found wandering in the streets of Cambridge, clad only in a shirt and pair of trousers, at his late home, Charles Ruggles told the officers how he jumped through the window of the Cooper tenement to escape the flames after the overturning of the lamp.

To a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day, Ruggles gave his version of the origin of the fire.

"I went to the Cooper home yesterday afternoon," said Ruggles, "to call upon Mrs. Cooper's father, John Dwyer.

"I was invited to pass the night with Dwyer and after we prepared for bed he accidentally overturned the lamp. I did the best I could to awaken the members of the family, without success, and, to save my life, jumped from the window."

STATE PLANS MANY FETES FOR PRINCE

Will Arrive in Boston on Monday, Escorted by the Governor.

WILL STAY AT ALGONQUIN

Prince Wilhelm of Sweden, who has startled Newport by his request that no champagne or "highballs" be served at dinners to which he be invited, and whose democratic manners have taken by storm the general public, will be given a royal welcome when he arrives in Boston on Monday next.

The elaborate program for his entertainment has been definitely arranged, and the Prince and his suite, which includes many notables, will be given an opportunity to appreciate the friendliness of the American nation.

The Prince will be met at Worcester by the Governor, who will be accompanied by Colonel Roger Wolcott and Colonel Samuel Parker. After participating in the various festivities arranged in honor of the Prince by the Mayor and the Swedish residents of Worcester, the party will board the 3.15 train for Boston.

During his stay here the prince's headquarters will be at the Algonquin Club, where on Monday evening the State dinner will take place. There will be no speechmaking after dinner, except toasts to the President, the King of Sweden and the guest of honor.

At 9 o'clock a reception will be given by the Prince and the Governor. Owing to the large number of societies who have signified their intention of attending, it has been necessary to change the place of this reception from the Algonquin Club to the Hotel Somerset. No tickets of admission will be necessary.

At 8 o'clock a committee of the Swedish citizens of Massachusetts have arranged for a festival for the cadets, officers and crew of the Flygtt at Odd Fellows Hall. Admittance to this festival will be by ticket at fifty cents each, which may be purchased at the door. After the Prince has received such citizens as may gather at the Hotel Somerset, he will proceed to Odd Fellows Hall with the Governor and briefly greet those who are assembled there.

On Tuesday morning the prince and his suite will make a tour of the city and also visit Harvard University in automobiles. Adjutant-General James B. Parker will be in charge, as it is necessary for the Governor to fill an engagement at New Bedford in the morning, serving with the Old Home Week procession in that city.

At 1 o'clock a private luncheon is to be tendered the Prince by Mr. James H. Kidder at the Somerset Club, which the Governor will attend. At 2:30 the Prince will leave the Somerset Club with the Governor for Major Hayden's yacht, which will convey the Prince, his immediate suite, the Governor and two staff officers, to Nahant.

The forty naval cadets on board the Flygtt, the officers of that ship, the Governor's staff and the officers of the army and navy stationed at Boston, will proceed to Nahant in a special car attached to the train leaving Boston at 1 o'clock, 3:30. At Lynn special trolley cars will convey these guests to the door of the club.

At the Nahant Club grounds Mrs. Guild will receive the Prince. Owing to the limited extension of the accommodations it has been necessary to restrict the invitations to members of the Nahant Club and their families and the official military and naval guests.

"AERIAL NAVY'S DAY IS NEAR"

—Baden-Powell

LONDON, Aug. 24.—Major Baden-Powell, the English expert on aerial navigation, believes the question of air warships is a grave and important one.

"I believe there will be a time," he says, "not very far off, either—say ten years hence—when we shall have aerial navies. Supposing that all nations have airships. Are they to be allowed to go over one another's countries photographing fortifications in times of peace? I don't see how you can prevent it. Indeed, it is impossible to fire at them, for, as field guns are made at present, they have not got the elevation."

Back Bay Society Woman, Crusader in Spotless Town, In Cell on Larceny Charge

Mrs. Morrill Achieved Fame in Fight to Clear South End of Vice a Few Years Ago. Author of Book on "Race Suicide"

Penniless in London, She Came Home to Face Serious Charge. Woman Expects Bail Sometime To-day.

Mrs. Jennie Foster Morrill, former Back Bay society crusader for purity.

Arrest of Woman Well Known in Social and Woman's Club Circles Causes a Sensation.

Forced to occupy a cell at the Charles street jail, in default of a paltry $1,000 bail, is the plight of Mrs. Jennie Folsom Morrill, a former Back Bay society woman, who as a crusader in the famous civic campaign of 1900 tried to make the South End a spotless section. Monday she will be arraigned in the Municipal Court, charged with larceny of $495 from the estate of her dead husband in having disposed of some of the property without legal right.

Nonchalant, and showing no signs of nervousness, Mrs. Morrill graciously accepted the inevitable and was led away to jail after she had pleaded not guilty to the charge before Judge Dorf last Thursday. She is confident that her present embarrassment is but temporary and that her friends will soon come to her rescue.

Her arrest, which occurred at the office of a downtown physician, came on the heels of her return from a quick trip abroad, the funds for which, it is alleged, were raised by selling some of the household furniture left by her dead husband, Larry V. Morrill, as part of the estate at No. 56 Berkeley street, where she resided up to June 1.

A Back Bay Sensation.

For several years a public reader, the author of several books, and a lecturer on physical culture and the laws defying old age, Mrs. Morrill was a large power of friends in the Back Bay, and her arrest has proved a big sensation in Boston's society circles. Great secrecy was maintained by the police and counsel in her arraignment before Judge Dolf.

It is expected that she will provide bail through relatives from Manchester, N. H., who are expected to reach Boston to-day for that purpose.

She was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Attorney Charles W. Hoad, appearing for Thomas E. Washburn, a real estate dealer, who holds a mortgage note as a claim against the property left by her late husband. Although there is an action pending in the Equity Superior Court against her, arising over her handling of the estate left by her husband.

On June 25 Mrs. Morrill was a passenger on the Ivernia, sailing from Boston for Queenstown. A cable was received by her former solicitor, William H. Lyon of Boston, bearing the date of July 10, stating she was in London, without a penny, and requesting that he send her money so that she might return on the next steamer. The money was not sent her, but according to her own story a prominent soap manufacturer of Boston, who was told of her plight in a fashionable London hostelry, loaned her enough money to return to Boston.

In a letter written aboard the Ivernia on her trip to England in June, Mrs. Morrill admitted there were several creditors waiting for their money and she requested that her solicitor attend to these by disposing of her estate at No. 56 Berkeley street.

At Issue with Roosevelt.

A local publishing house has just published her latest book, "Steady Light," a work in which she takes issue with President Roosevelt on his race suicide doctrine.

Mrs. Morrill in forty-six years old, although she looks younger. She is the widow of Larry V. Morrill, at one time a teacher at Auburn, N. H. Her home was formerly in Manchester. She took up her residence in Boston following the death of her husband, a man, Miss Georgina Morrill, who left the estate on Berkeley street. Mr. Morrill died a year ago last April.

Shortly after Mrs. Morrill and her husband established themselves in the fashionable Back Bay district she began to take a lively interest in the movement to secure women to purify that section, and acquired considerable notoriety. She is a gifted talker and prepossessing.

FREED, WILL WORK TO PAY STOLEN FUND

Clarence D. Miller Looking for Employment to Return Purloined Money.

MOTHER WILL HELP HIM

Clarence D. Miller, a young man of Roxbury, after having stolen $100 from his employers to help support his wife and mother in comfort, is to-day looking for a position where he can earn enough to take care of them in a more frugal way and at the same time pay every dollar back that he took.

Judge Schofield, after listening to the story of the young man, and seeing the tears of his mother, allowed him to go on probation.

"I'll get a situation and pay every bit of the money back," said the young man.

"How do you expect to get employment after this?" asked the judge, knowing something of the difficulty a man who has transgressed the law and tries to retrieve himself.

Then the prisoner's mother declared that she would go to work herself.

"No," said the son, "but I'll get work and pay it back myself."

Miller was allowed to go on probation. The judge will later prescribe the manner in which the money may be returned.

'BREAKER' FIRES ON CROWD IN MEAT STRIKE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The first shooting in the strike of the meat wagon drivers occurred to-day when Jacob Handel, an eighteen-year-old strike-breaker, shot and, he admits, tried to kill several men who he says attacked him.

The shooting revealed the startling fact that the strike-breakers employed by the packing houses have been well armed with deadly weapons.

Handel, who was employed to drive a wagon for the New York Veal and Mutton Company of East avenue and Forty-fourth street, went into a saloon at Forty-third street and Third avenue, accompanied by Special Officer Otto Sherman, who had been employed as guard him.

Patrolman Sheehan, outside of the saloon, heard a fight in progress in the saloon, and as he ran to the door he heard a shot. When he opened the door he found Handel on the floor with a half dozen men on top of him and Sherman beating the men with a long club with which the packers had armed him.

This month, usually a dull one for Cupid & Co., will, apparently, be an extra busy one.

For the first months of this year 4,175 licenses were issued and if the present increase keeps up the year in Boston will see 9,000 marriage licenses issued, or 4,800 happy young men and women.

FRIDAY, 23RD AS HOOK NIGHT

A more appropriate date than Friday, the twenty-third of the month, could not have been selected by Manager Farren for the opening hook night at the Columbia, but the youthful aspirants for histrionic honors did not fear the day or its hoodoo number judging by the large turnout who were all anxious to unfold their talents either as singers or dancers, with an occasional stage hand thrown in for spice of dramatic reading. Pretty girls predominated, and it came to handing out the fun, and showed far more aptitude for stage work than the young men who strove for honors. Miss Elsie Russell, the heroine of many an amateur event last Winter, was again on hand and did far better with her specialty than many professionals. The two Foley brothers, who won the first prize, also covered themselves with glory.

One of the big hits of the night was made by George Russell, who sang some timely parodies.

M'KINLEY AND WIFE TO REST IN BRONZE

SEA SPOILS JOY OF HONEYMOON

Tired of a honeymoon spent in a ten days' trip on a fishing schooner, and just recovering from a severe case of seasickness, a Gloucester fisherman brought to a wharf to-day Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hilton of Gloucester. The groom, pale and haggard, telephoned his employers in Gloucester asking for ten days' additional leave of absence in order to enjoy a "real honeymoon."

Both bride and groom were employes in the office of a Gloucester fishing firm, and decided to enjoy the novelty of a wedding trip on one of the company's boats. On the trip to the Georges rough gales with easterly winds prevailed, and the return trip was no easier. Neither bride nor groom left their stateroom during the trip.

FRENCH BEGINS PROBE OF NEW HAVEN DEALS

Starts Federal Inquiry Into Merger and Absorption of Trolleys.

ANSWERS LEAGUE LETTER

As a result of the facts laid before him by Grenville S. MacFarland, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Independence League, United States District Attorney Asa P. French announces to-day that he is making a careful investigation of the proposed merger of the New Haven Railway and the Boston & Maine, to see if the anti-trust laws has not been violated.

The information reciting testimony of Charles S. Mellen, president of the New Haven road, given before the legislative committee, in which Mr. Mellen admitted that he had already practical control of New England's last independent railway, was laid before Mr. French on Wednesday.

Inquiry into Other Deals.

Mr. MacFarland and Mr. French conferred on the matter yesterday afternoon and later Mr. French prepared a letter to Mr. MacFarland, in which he stated that he had taken up the matter and that he was not only going into the merger of the two roads, but was going to find out if the New Haven had not violated the law in the acquisition of steam and street railways within the last five or six years.

Mr. French said that President Roosevelt and the Attorney-General were interested in the investigation, and that, for himself, as long as he is District Attorney he would do his best "to enforce the Federal laws vigorously, fearlessly and impartially."

The letter to Mr. MacFarland follows:

Letter to MacFarland.

"Department of Justice, United States Attorney's Office, District of Massachusetts, Federal Building, Boston, Aug. 23, 1907.

"Grenville S. MacFarland, Esq., Chairman Executive Committee, Independence League of Massachusetts, 15 State Street, Boston:

"My Dear Sir—I have received your communication of August 21, calling my attention to the alleged violation of the federal anti-trust law by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, by Mr. Charles S. Mellen, its president, and possibly by others, with reference to the acquisition and control of stock in the Boston & Maine Railroad Company upon the theory which you advance and undertake to demonstrate, that the two railroads compete in interstate commerce.

"I beg to say in reply that this whole matter has been under advisement by the President and the department of justice for some time.

Probes Trolley Grabs.

"The stenographic report of Mr. Mellen's testimony before the Massachusetts legislative committee on railroads and his previous communication to Governor Guild, of both of which you quote, were promptly transmitted to the Attorney-General, and I was advised by him some days ago to begin, and I am now making, a careful inquiry, not only into the facts to which you refer connected with the attempted consolidation of the two railroads but of the acquisition, direct and indirect, by the said New Haven road, during the past five or six years, of other steam roads, or street railways and of steamships also engaged in competitory interstate traffic.

"The purpose of this inquiry is to ascertain how far, if at all, these transactions have been a violation of the anti-trust act and to take such action as the result of the investigation may justify, and to the end that the policy of the national government with regard to carriers engaged in interstate commerce, as expressed by Congress and interpreted by the Supreme Court in the Trans-Missouri and Northern Securities cases, may be enforced to the end that individuals, as well as corporations, offending against the law may be adequately punished.

Will Enforce Laws.

"The policy of the administration as to prosecutions under the Anti-Trust act has been too clearly and emphatically stated by the President in his recent speech at Provincetown, as well as by the Attorney-General, to leave any doubt in the mind of the people that, while honestly conducted corporations and their officers have nothing to fear, there is to be no discriminating with those who, after a thorough and impartially conducted investigation, appear to have been violators of the law.

"I beg to add, in view of your kind personal allusion to myself, the assurance that so long as I am United States District Attorney for this district, I shall do my best to enforce the federal laws vigorously, fearlessly and impartially. I am, very respectfully yours, (Sgd.) A. P. FRENCH,

"United States District Attorney."

Women's Sphere Home, Care of Her Husband and Babies, Says Gibbons

BELIEVES IN INDUSTRIAL TRAINING, BUT AIM SHOULD BE MATRIMONY.

That a woman who does not work is "an incubus on society" is the opinion of Cardinal Gibbons. The noted prelate made this statement at the home of the Rev. Father O'Hara at Southampton, L. I., where he is spending the Summer months.

The Cardinal had been questioned in an earlier interview as saying that "The more woman invades the domain of man the more will her social and moral status be lowered."

When this was recalled to him the Cardinal said:

"Every woman should work. There is no room in the world for parasites. But," he added, "married women should work in the home.

"I give woman great credit for her advancement in industrial pursuits. I did not speak of her industrial activity, which I approve. I referred to her efforts to enter political life and of the tendency of some married women to neglect their husbands and their homes for clubs.

"Woman," continued the Cardinal, "has shown their fitness for certain pursuits. As stenographers and typewriters, as saleswomen, bookkeepers and cashiers, they have become invaluable. What would we do without them, indeed? But their work is not an invasion of man's domain.

"Nevertheless, woman's sphere is the home, and married women should find their work in caring for their homes and husbands and children."

"What do you think of the argument that factories have taken woman's work away from the home?" was asked.

"Formerly, of course, the housewife made her own bread, did all her own preserving and wove garments for the entire family. Now all these things are done in the factory, and to do the same work she has to go out to it there."

"That," said Cardinal Gibbons, "is an economic question I have not studied.

"A girl works in a factory until she marries," he continued. "But marriage is the aim of her life. That is being carried at Portsmouth with the strong competition between the factory and the home," the Cardinal continued. "But the home will win. I am glad to correct the impression that I thought woman's sphere was the industrial sphere. I referred only to women in politics and to clubwomen who neglect their homes."

NEW GIANT SIX-MASTER LAUNCHED

DOCKLAND, Me., Aug. 24.—Rockland has only contributed the largest vessel ever built in her yards to the Atlantic coast service, but with the launching this afternoon of the six-masted schooner Mettie B. Crowley, by the wife of Captain J. G. Crowley, manager of the Coastwise Transportation Company, after whom the vessel was named.

The Crowley was ready to start on her first trip when she slid down the ways to the ocean, so far as her equipment was concerned, but a few finishing touches will be applied before she sails for her first consignment of coal.

The gross tonnage of the vessel is not known with exactness as yet. She has a carrying capacity of 4,850 tons. From the end of her spanker to the tip of the jibboom she measures 412 feet. Each of the lower masts of the vessels measures 122 feet, and the upper ones bright the total length to 180 feet.

Many Boston people accompanied the launching party.

MAMMOTH SCHOONER IS CHRISTENED BY BAY STATE GIRL

MYSTIC, Ct., Aug. 24.—In the presence of 3,000 persons the five-masted schooner Elvira Bell, the largest and only five-masted single deck schooner on the Atlantic coast, was launched from the yard of the Mystic Transportation Company to-day. The schooner is fully rigged and will go into commission at once.

The launch was successful in every way, the vessel being christened by Miss Elvira Bell, daughter of Charles Bell of Holyoke, Mass. The schooner is 245 feet in length over all, 40 feet beam and will carry 1,800 tons of coal or a million feet of lumber. She is built with a spoon bow, and is a new departure in this respect.

NICKERSON CREW GIVEN FREEDOM

The twelve members of the crew of the Elsie S. Nickerson, who for ten days have been detained at quarantine as smallpox suspects, were returned to the schooner today. They will sail with the schooner Wednesday. Jed Pierce, the sailor who was found to be afflicted with smallpox, is still at quarantine, but is recovering.

M'LEAN TO RACE ABROAD.

Hugh MacLean, the champion motor-paced bicyclist of America, will sail September 5 for Europe, as he has signed to ride six races abroad, both in France and Germany. He will be gone till November.

FORT ANDREWS TO DIRECT HUB FORTIFICATIONS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—It is announced that it is the intention eventually to make Fort Andrews the headquarters of the coast artillery district of Boston instead of Fort Banks. Fort Andrews will be used because of its central location with respect to the entire chain of Boston forts and because it already has the entire commanding officer could better regulate the control of the fire of the other forts from Fort Andrews.

Plans have been completed for the perfection of the Boston artillery district. Forts Banks and Andrews are to be three-company posts and the principal forts on the chain, Forts Strong, Warren and Revere, will remain two-company posts. The artillerymen will be stationed at Forts Standish, Heath, Independence, Winthrop, Nahant, Deer Island and Gallops Island, beyond a few men to care for the guns, except in actual battle or during manoeuvres.

The artillery company will remain at the five forts where there are barracks, and will only man the other forts during artillery practice and drills.

Progress is being made in the formation of the three new coast defense companies to be stationed in the Boston forts under the increase granted through the new artillery bill. These are the 152d company, which is being recruited at Fort Banks; the 153d, which is being recruited at Fort Andrews, and the 151st, being recruited at Fort Revere. The latter will be stationed in charge of a new commander, Colonel Leverett H. Walker, who was until recently in command of the artillery district of the Columbia at Fort Stevens, Oregon. The staff consists of Captain James P. Howell, adjutant, and Captain H. D. Todd, Jr., ordnance officer of the district of Boston.

Captain Howell's office has been given the commander's staff in the Boston district, which is being moved from forts at Fort Banks, August 28, and ordered to the Boston Army Base, Atlantic avenue, at Fort Totten, New York, for instruction.

With the formation of the three new companies in the Boston district there will be a total of twelve companies and two dozen artillery officers in the district.

JUST LOOK AT THIS LIST OF ATTRACTIONS

Record Breaking Good Time for All at Paragon Park.

REAL PARADISE OF FUN

Sofie Knowiton and her daredevil dip, Speedy, the world champion high diver. The "Human Spider" on his hundred-foot rope.

A half-hour act with performing Teddy Bears.

A three-round boxing match with a fighting kangaroo.

The special arenic performance of Eph, the remarkable lanky elephant.

That is the out-door bill for Paragon Park every afternoon and evening of the coming week.

The last three numbers have heretofore been confined to the Boston museum and stage. They will still be seen at the Boston show, but in addition these acts will be performed in the circus ring in the middle of the lagoon, swelling the special performances at Paragon Park to what Manager Dodge claims is the biggest series of specialties ever given free in a Summer park.

Strenuous Times for Eph.

It will be an exceedingly strenuous week for Eph, whose stomach is likely to pay the penalty, for between regular acts in the tent it is Eph's work to get out and work the board walk on both sides, filling up on pop-corn and candy at the expense of easy-minded visitors who give up dainties freely either from desire or unconsciousness, which is all the same to Eph, occasionally, too, he forages in Palm Garden.

Now Eph will have to do a double act, believe you seen it? He waltzes, walks a narrow plank, stands on two feet, sits in a chair and eats and drinks with his trainer, rings a dinner bell constantly before and shows all the brilliancy of a full-sized, high-minded elephant, whereas over little Eph is but three years old and only weighs a ton.

But think of the free fun for park visitors. And for the free ticket crowds on Monday and Tuesday.

Swimming Contrat Makes Hit.

These same SUNDAY AMERICAN coupon holders will get all this with their ticket of admission to the park. Besides, they get thirty cents worth of paid shows, Creation, the theatre reserved seats and all and the Swing.

Manager Dodge has received a number of earnest inquiries about the possible swimming contrat in the lagoon a week from Monday. It is evident that there are dozens of contestants in and about Boston who would enter. Some want long distance races and others desire short water sprints. They are men, women, boys and girls.

It remains to work the problem out, classify it, and hear from a great number who desire to enter. Manager Dodge will cheerfully consider applications, inquiries and suggestions, and a great swimming tournament may result.

JOIN THE HAPPY SUNDAY AMERICAN FAMILY AT REVERE

With the season gradually drawing to a close, the attendance at Revere Beach is the greatest for the year this week, and a correspondingly large number of SUNDAY AMERICAN free tickets to the famous amusement resorts on the boulevard and avenues are being used.

Each day is an unusually busy day, being the one day of the week when all the resorts are open, and the SUNDAY AMERICAN free ticket man accepted coupons from hundreds. They are: Mystic Park, Rollaway Skating Rink, Rough Rider Shooting Gallery, Tour of the Clouds, Roller Coaster, Journey to the North Pole, Whirlpool Rapids, Theatre Comique, Auto Go-Round, Automatic Bowling Alleys and Hilltop Park.

See next Sunday's AMERICAN for a new set of these free tickets.

Canobie Lake Park Show.

The new show at the great theatre, Canobie Lake Park, for the coming week will be "The Man With the Three Wives," in three acts, with songs and specialties, a farce comedy of unusual merit and full of fun for every line.

This show, together with the Laughing Gallery, House of Mirth and Rock of Ages alleys will be free to SUNDAY AMERICAN coupon holders two days next week, and the tickets are to be published in to-morrow's SUNDAY AMERICAN.

They represent twenty-five cents worth of pleasure, besides the natural and artificial beauties of the park, while the train arrangements are the very best to all surrounding cities and towns.

Pastor's Lexington Park, where the animals frolic and where almost every afternoon and evening will find in to-morrow's SUNDAY AMERICAN a free ticket of admission to this splendid woodland resort, good for two days of the coming week.

DOG FOLLOWS MASTER INTO COURT DOCK

Perhaps it was the devotion of Dewey, a dog, who made his first appearance in a law court to-day, that gained for his master, Timothy Cronin, judicial clemency. Cronin was arrested by the police court because his wife accused him of intoxication and was set free on probation after the dog had smacked into his face to be near his master. It had been a try-ing day for the faithful animal.

When Cronin was arrested the dog followed into the police station and when he was locked up, out. He followed the wagon to the police station and was locked up with his master. Then the police court touched the heart of the police, who let him stay in Captain Brett's cell. When Cronin awoke he saw his pet beyond the bars and the dog awoke at his cry of sympathy.

Then Cronin was set free the dog barked in joy. He followed Cronin to his home and is there yet. West Newton, and was happy all the way.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Worried by the condition of his friend, Elihu Root, Secretary of State, President Roosevelt paid a flying secret visit to the Muldoon Sanitarium. Mr. Root is improving, in his fight to regain his health.

Mr. Root will to-day cover eighteen miles on horseback, walk three miles over the rugged Westchester hills, pass the sixteen-pound medicine ball for a quarter of an hour, and wind up by boxing five hot three-minute rounds with Professor William Muldoon, who at the tender age of sixty-two is one of the world's greatest living athletes. They are to meet in the Rollaway Skating Rink. Treatment of Root.

"What have you been doing since he has been under your charge, professor?" asked an inquisitive youth, who, with a score of others, drove over the hills to Muldoon's to the sanitarium yesterday afternoon. "That isn't a fair question," said Muldoon. "That's one of my secrets. Why not go to a physician and ask him what course of treatment he would give to a certain patient. I individualize the treatment of my patients, apportion out the work according to a man's strength, age and disposition. Some men thrive on one kind of work and some on another."

"How long will it take to do your work since he has been here?"

"He and I have covered eighteen miles on horseback this morning," was the reply. "He has been put to the shovel by eighteen spells. Then he passed the medicine ball for a quarter of an hour and we wound up with the gloves, boxing five rounds. That's quite enough for one day."

"Did he box with the President during the visit?" asked the same young person, eagerly.

"What a question," said Muldoon, impatiently. "Though he laughed heartily at what he deemed the absurdity I left the box with the President? Why, Mr. Root is sixty-three years old and was very feeble when I met him. What I did would be for a man who was suffering from nervous exhaustion to put on the gloves with the President, a strenuous, wiry man, who is known the world over for his skill and strength and prowess."

"Do you think that the minute the President came here he dashed for Root and asked him if he wanted to box?

"Well did you and the President put the gloves on?" persisted the ardent seeker for information?"

"Well, scarcely," said Muldoon. "The President is a reasonably busy man and I am a very busy man myself. He wouldn't come here and ask me to box with him. Do you think that I would go to Washington and seek to stop the machinery of the nation by asking Mr. Roosevelt to let his work rest while he and I had a tryout with the gloves?"

"If Mr. Root didn't box with the President, what did they do during the visit, and what day was the President here?" Muldoon was asked.

"Well, they talked," was the reply, "I presume that Mr. Roosevelt was worried about his friend's condition, for they are not only political associates, but the warmest friendship exists, and the President was anxious to see what improvement was being made. What they talked about I don't know, and naturally wouldn't tell it if I did know."

BATTLESHIP FLEET STARTS IN DECEMBER

Waships on Trip to Pacific Will Go by Way of Magellan Straits.

TO SAIL IN FOUR DIVISIONS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Throwing aside all concealment and subterfuge, Secretary Loeb has at last made definite announcement that the Atlantic fleet of sixteen battleships is going to the Pacific Ocean. Added to this, which has been public information for several months, it is also disclosed that the fleet will go by way of the Straits of Magellan, instead of by the Suez Canal, and that they will start some time in December.

These facts were all definitely announced in the Cabinet several weeks ago. Indeed, it may be said that the general naval board was the suggestion that planned the trip, never seriously considered sending the ships by the Mediterranean route. While it would be shorter for the fleet to go by that way, if it were destined to the Philippines, there are political as well as material reasons for sending it around the South American continent.

Secretary Root's recent trip last year to principal cities of South America was as educational to him as it was to the people whom he visited. He came back with a better conception of the vast opportunities for trade, and with a higher respect for the political importance of the southern countries than has been shown by any preceding American statesman, not even excepting Blaine, who made making a hobby of the cultivation of South American interests, had ever actually visited there.

The sixteen battleships will go in divisions of four ships each. It is probable that there will be an interval of a day or two between the departure of several divisions, so as to facilitate coaling at their various ports on their long journey. Their first stop will be at Guantanamo.

Acting Secretary of State Bacon, Secretary Root, Admiral Evans and Rear Admiral Sperry, chief of the naval operations division, have conferred with the President regarding the details of the trip.

The question of the route by which it will return to the Atlantic has not as yet been decided.

The destroyer flotilla will leave for the Pacific about the same time as the fleet, but will not accompany it.

FEARING U. S. FLEET JAPAN WILL BUILD NEW WAR SQUADRON

YOKOHAMA, Japan, Aug. 24.—Japan is making preparations for the organization of a Hongkong squadron in addition to the one which is now being maintained at Shanghai. This will add largely to her fighting force and is a menacing answer to the visit of the American warships to the Pacific.

The official explanation of this is "that trade with ports south of Shanghai and Hongkong is rapidly growing and it is believed that trade in and about Amoan will increase to such an extent as to call for such entente and will necessitate the dispatch of warships in that direction.

Diary of a Fat Lady Who Started Out to Reduce Her Weight

Written by Herself

JUNE 15.—The plain ugly truth is that I am fat! I won't try to call it by any other name, for it's just as bad, whether you say obese or too plump.

Fat is the real word, and the most dreaded one in the vocabulary of the modern woman.

In George Ade's land of "The Slim Princess," the fat lady is queen. In America she is to be pitied.

There is literally no real place for her, and, though she exists, it is by a sort of gracious tolerance, of which she is ever conscious.

It is as though her fat were a deformity and people were saying "Poor thing! Isn't it too bad? But we must be kind to her."

The fashions are all for the slender, small-waisted, hipless woman. The apartment house are built for her. So are the chairs in the restaurants and the open cars with the rule of five per seat and the high steps. And in Boston we are for sidewalks.

For a year I have known that I was getting plumper, but when one has been a bean pole all her life the accession of curves is such a delight that before you are surfeited with the joy of them they have grown into billows.

In a mad moment of idleness yesterday I stepped on one of those foolish weighing machines and for a penny learned the truth. One hundred and eighty pounds.

I've said it over and over and over in all its awfulness to myself—one hundred eighty pounds. Just thirty pounds too much, by the most generous calculation, and only twenty pounds from the disgraceful two hundred.

I ate no dinner to-night and have a splitting headache, but I must get used to headaches and heartaches, too, if I expect to reduce.

Tries Starving

June 16.—Consulted my doctor. He smiled at my fears, said my physical condition is perfect, and told me to omit potatoes and sweets if I felt that I must diet. Really, he said, my weight was quite normal.

June 17.—To-day I met Kate Jenkins on Boylston street. I haven't seen her in months, as she has been in Denver. Her first greeting was: "My dear, how fat you've grown!"

She used to be twice as fat as I am, but now her figure is beautifully slender and she looks so girlish.

We lunched together, and I told her what I was doing to reduce.

She laughed and said "you might just as well try to rub Mount Kearsarge away with a pumice stone."

"Don't just diet," she said, "you must literally starve. Don't eat breakfast and drink a cup of hot water with lemon juice the first thing in the morning. At lunch, eat stewed prunes and dry toast, and at dinner rare beef, spinach and lettuce with vinegar and no oil, and never, never drink a drop with your meals. Of course it's a horrid, but you can't expect to lose flesh happily."

I am going to try it, though I loathe prunes and spinach.

June 24.—Just a week to-day since I began to diet, and I feel a thousand per cent. And I haven't lost an ounce. And my temper is simply unsupportable.

Walks and Baths

June 25.—The diet is too severe. I saw a woman to-day who is a friend of Mary Jones's Aunt Helen. She was much, much fatter than I am, and now she is a dream of slenderness.

She says Dr. Wise was right; just omit potatoes and sweets, don't drink with your meals, but exercise. Put on a heavy sweater and walk five miles before breakfast. Then walk five miles in the afternoon.

Take a hot bath just before going to bed, remaining in the tub, with the water as hot as can be borne, for a full half-hour.

In the morning, after the walk, take a cold plunge.

She says you will feel like another woman in a week.

July 2.—Mary Jones's Aunt Helen's friend was right. I do feel like another woman—a poor, dejected, tired out, frazzled old specimen.

Weighed to-day, same story, 180. Must try other scales.

To Be Continued Monday.

Handy Things for Housewives to Know

WHEN frying fish, instead of using an egg to brush over it, make a paste of flour and water, brush the fish over this, and then dust with breadcrumbs and fry at once. It will look just as nice as if done with an egg, and more especially when eggs are dear it is a great saving.

When starting housekeeping never furnish the whole house from attic to basement at once. A far better plan is to get only just what one really needs, and add other things as one can afford, or when one comes across them cheaply. Besides being an economical plan, this gives a most interesting occupation to people who have a little time on their hands, as a newly married woman often has.

* * *

Fruit stains on table linen should be rubbed as soon as possible with a little methylated spirit, and the stain will entirely disappear.

* * *

When ironing, keep a piece of rag by you that has been wrung out of cold water and rubbed with a little soap. After each time using the irons, run this lightly over them before using, and they will slip over the things as easily as possible, more especially over anything with starch in it.

* * *

If too much salt has been added to any dish, a little sugar and then a sprinkling of vinegar will often rectify the mistake.

* * *

When peeling apples have at hand a pan of cold water to which a few drops of lemon juice have been added. As they are pared, drop the apples one by one into the pan. They will keep white then when apples should, when possible, be cut with a silver knife.

* * *

For a damp cupboard, which is liable to cause mildew, place a few lumps of lime into it, which will not only absorb all dampness, but removes and disinfect the space.

* * *

Shabby carpets may be brightened up considerably by brushing them thoroughly first with a stiff broom and then a short, stubby one, dipped in hot water, not wet. Afterward get a pail of warm water and add a cupful of vinegar, bring out a coarse cloth in it, and rub the carpet all over with this, changing the water when it.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

HAS DONE HER PART

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady of twenty-one years, and am keeping company with a young man one year my senior for two years. The other day we had a slight quarrel, and he has not spoken to me since. I have written him twice, but received a very cold answer. Now, Miss Fairfax, I would like to know what to do. Would you keep on, as he loves me, and I so cold like to gain his love back again, or would you forget it? It is a hard matter for me to forget him. PERPLEXED.

My dear, you have done all that you can do toward a reconciliation. Do not write again. It would only mean humiliating yourself for nothing. He is treating you very rudely. Let him take the first step, and if he does not take it soon put him out of your mind. It will be hard, but if he is so unkind and unforgiving you are better off without him.

TAKING A LIBERTY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man, twenty-one years of age, and in coming to work every morning I must take a surface car to the south. On this surface car I happen to meet a certain young lady who is indeed quite pretty and who I would very much like to get acquainted with. She looks at me, but does not give me the slightest bit of encouragement to speak to her. I do not know of anyone who could introduce me to her, but I am sure she would make no resistance if I should take the liberty of going up and speaking with her. What would you advise? J. F.

I am very sure that she would think you were taking a great liberty in speaking to her, and you would most probably be well snubbed. If such spoke to every pretty girl you would have to work for it. It would amount to a persecution. If you cannot meet her in the proper way you had better give up the idea of meeting her at all.

Father and Son.

"DO you know," Lady Caroom said, motioning Brooks to a seat by her side, "that I feel very middle-class and elderly when I undertake to speak to you about Sybil."

Brooks was a little paler than usual. This was one of the occasions when he found his emotions very hard to subdue. And it had come so suddenly.

"After we left Eaton," Lady Caroom said thoughtfully, "I noticed a distinct change in her. The first evidence of it was in her treatment of Sydney Molyneux. I am quite sure that she purposely precipitated matters, and when he proposed refused him absolutely."

"I do not think," Brooks found voice to say, "that she would ever have married Sydney Molyneux."

"Perhaps not," Lady Caroom admitted, "but at any rate before our visit to Eaton she was quite content to have him around—she was by no means eager to make up her mind definitely. After we left she seemed to deliberately plan to dispose of him finally. Since then—I am talking in confidence, Kingston—she has refused the Duke of Atherstone."

Impossible!

Brooks was silent. His self-control was being severely tested. His heart was beating like a sledgehammer—he was very anxious to avoid Lady Caroom's eyes.

"Atherstone," she said, slowly, "is quite the most eligible bachelor in England, and he is, as you know, a very nice, unaffected boy. There is only one possible inference for me, as Sybil's mother, to draw, and that is that she cares, or is beginning to think that she cares, for some one else."

"Some one else? Did you know whom?" Brooks asked quickly.

"I do not know," Lady Caroom answered, "I do not."

Brooks made a feeble attempt at disguise. He looked across at Lady Caroom, and his eyes were very bright.

"I have never believed," he said, "that Sybil would be likely to care for me. I can scarcely believe it now."

Lady Caroom smiled.

"In any case," she said, "would you ask her to marry you? You must see that as things are it would be impossible."

"Impossible?" he muttered. "Impossible?"

"Of course," she answered, briskly. "You must be a man of the world enough to know that. You could not ask a girl in Sybil's position to share a borrowed name, nor would the other conditions permit of your marrying her. That is why I want to talk with you."

"Well?"

"Is there any immediate chance of your reconciliation with the Marquis of Arranmore?"

"None," Brooks answered.

"Well, then," Lady Caroom said, "there is no immediate change of your being in a position to marry Sybil. Don't look at me as though I were saying unkind things. I am not. I am only talking common sense. What is your income?"

"About two thousand pounds, but some of that—half, perhaps more—goes to the society."

"Exactly. It would be impossible for you to marry Sybil on the whole of it, or even the whole of it."

"You want me then," Brooks said, "to be reconciled to my father. Yet you—you yourself will not trust him."

Cruel Request

"I have not expressed any wish of the sort," Lady Caroom said, kindly. "I only wished to point out that as things are you were not in a position to ask Sybil to marry you, and therefore I want you to keep away from her. I mean this kindly for both of you. Of course Sybil is absolutely in earnest, if the matter has gone so far, we must talk it all over again and see what is to be done. But I want you to give her a chance. Keep away for a time. Your father may live for twenty-five years. If your relations with him all that time continue as they are now, marriage with a girl brought up like Sybil would be an impossibility."

Brooks was silent for several moments. Then he looked up suddenly.

"Has Lady Sybil said anything to you—which led you to speak to me?"

Lady Caroom shook her head.

"No. She is very young, you know, Frankly, I do not believe that she knows her own mind. You have not spoken to her, of course?"

"No!"

"And you will not?"

"I suppose," Brooks said, "that I must not think of it."

"You must give up thinking about her, of course," Lady Caroom said, "until——"

"Until when?"

"Until you can ask her—if ever you do ask her—to marry you in your proper name."

Brooks set his teeth and walked up and down the little room.

"May Be Never"

"That," he said, "may be never."

"Exactly," Lady Caroom agreed. "That is why I am suggesting that you do not see her so often."

He stopped opposite her.

"Does he—does Lord Attramore know anything of this?"

She shook her head.

"Not from me. He may have heard whispers. To tell you the truth, I myself have been asked questions during the last few days. You have been seen about a good deal with Sybil, and you are rather a mystery to people. That is why I felt compelled to speak."

He nodded.

"I see."

"You must not blame me," she went on, softly. "You know, Kingston, that I like you, that I would give you Sybil willingly under other circumstances. I don't want to speak to her if I can help it. Will you have been seen about a good deal with Sybil, and you are rather a mystery to people. That is why I felt compelled to speak."

He nodded.

"I see."

"You must not blame me," she went on, softly. "You know, Kingston, that I like you, that I would give you Sybil willingly under other circumstances. I don't want to speak to her if I can help it. Will you have been seen about a good deal with Sybil, and you are rather a mystery to people. That is why I felt compelled to speak."

He nodded.

"I see."

"There is no possibility of that," he answered, "and the arrangement is all for itself, even in his selfishness."

His face hardened. "I am convinced. There is something so terribly impersonal, so terribly cold about it. He looks on at everything, he joins in nothing. They say there are two marriages in a man's life, whether he is winning or losing. He gives Brooks what credit he has earned, and remains as cold as ice to guests whom a prince would be glad to welcome. I have seen that great face the other day, and he gave up his place on the stand, just before the start, to a little girl, and never even troubled to watch the race, though his winnings were enormous. He bought the Frivolity Theatre, produced this new farce, and has never been inside the place. What does it mean, Kingston? There must be suffering behind this—terrible suffering. It is a law of retribution," Brooks said coldly. "He has made other people suffer all his life. Now perhaps his turn has come. He spends fortunes trying to amuse himself and cannot. Are we to pity him for that?"

Fears Scorn.

"I have heard of people," she said, looking at him intently, "who are too proud to show the better part of themselves, who rather than court pity or even sympathy will wear a mask always, will hide the good that is in them and exhibit the bad."

"You love him still?" he said, wonderingly.

Newest Suggestions for the Fall Bride

NO bride considers her napery complete nowadays, unless she possesses at least one luncheon set, comprising two sizes of doilies and a large centrepiece to match. This set may be of lace drawn work or embroidery, and she very often makes it herself. The centrepiece may be round or square, and is almost large enough to be called a tablecloth, since it is used on the bare table. The present fashion demands that this centrepiece, if embroidered, be worked in white thread.

Mexican drawn work sets are particularly pretty, since the dark wood of the table underneath displays the design well on the linen.

For ordinary occasions a plain hemstitched set, with square pieces, each with a large initial or monogram embroidered on it, is very pretty.

The correct method of embroidering the monogram or initial on a tablecloth is to place it at one end at a point twenty-seven inches from the end and right hand edge of the cloth. This places the initial so that it shows on top when the cloth is laid on the table. The lettering should be large and gracefully embroidered.

To Make a Success of Your Work

By Beatrice Fairfax

THRILS, there is nothing more certain than that if you want to do a thing properly you must stick to it until it is finished.

If you are going to take a position of any kind make up your mind before you start that you will put your very best effort into the work that you are undertaking.

You can't neglect your work one day and work feverishly the next day if you hope to be a success.

You must work evenly, consistently, always concentrating your attention on the work in hand.

There will be days when the drudgery will seem almost unbearable. No matter how congenial your chosen work may be, you will long to give it up and sigh for freedom.

But don't let yourself give way, and after the hour of depression has passed you will be, oh, so thankful that you had the strength of mind to win the battle.

Earn Your Money

If your work is well done you probably are well paid for it.

See that you honestly earn that money by giving your employer his money's worth of service.

If you are employed in the same office with a number of other girls the temptation to chatter will be great.

But, dear girls, that is not what you are paid to do. You are paid to do a certain piece of work, and unless you do it properly you are cheating your employer and are not earning your salary.

After your work is finished you can talk as much as you like, but during office hours your time belongs to the man who pays you for it.

Don't waste time talking over the telephone to foolish young men. If they are doing their work properly they have no more time to waste in telephoning than you have.

As for office flirtations, we have talked on that question so often that it seems hardly necessary to go into it again.

Don't Flirt in Shop

HOWEVER, I have one word to say, girls, and that is "don't."

It takes a girl's mind off her work and renders it impossible for her to do justice to herself or her employer.

Try to be cheerful over your work and don't get into the way of thinking that it is the hardest work any girl ever did or that you are the only person who can do it properly.

No matter how well you work, your place can always be filled.

Be cheerful. No employer can find much satisfaction in an employe who is bored with a sour, peevish face.

All work is hard if it is well done, my dears. So just make the best of things. The brighter and sunnier you are, the more easily you will get on with your work.

Lend a helping hand to your fellow-workers whenever it is possible. Make all the friends you can, and never begin play until working time is over.

TOMATO KETCHUP

HERE is an excellent rule for tomato ketchup, which was given me by a friend, who has used it for years: Boil and strain one peck of ripe tomatoes. To one quart of the juice add one large teaspoon of cloves (ground), one large teaspoon of salt, one large teaspoon of black pepper, one-half teaspoon of cayenne pepper, and if it is desired very hot, one large teaspoon of cinnamon; one-half pint of cider vinegar, one-half cup of sugar. Boil two and one-half hours and bottle. It is fine.

BLUEBERRY GEMS

CREAM together one cup of sugar, one-quarter cupful of butter and two eggs. Add one cup of sour milk with one teaspoon of soda dissolved in it. Add a little salt if butter is not very salt and enough flour to make a stiff batter. Bake in gem pans. Bake in hot oven. This should be eaten hot with vinegar sauce made as for puddings. It is good cold also.

GRAHAM GEMS

TWO cups of graham flour, one-half cup white sugar, one egg, two teaspoons of cream of tartar, one teaspoon of soda, one half cup white flour and a little salt. Mix with milk into a batter, not too soft. Bake in gem pans.

Unfailing Way of Ironing Silk

EVERY woman who has ever put a warm iron on silk knows the effect is a disastrous one, yet seams must be pressed flat.

Accomplished tailors and dressmakers obtain the desired result by passing a damp sponge over the edge of an iron which is just warm enough to leave it flat.

Such treatment does not involve any serious amount of labor, while it leaves the silk unharmed. If the garment is a large one it can sometimes be held taut by two persons while a third passes the point of the iron over the seams.

Hints on Health and Beauty

By the Professor

THIN LEGS AND BIG NECK

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Kindly tell me of something that will make my legs grow fatter, as they are so thin as to cause ridicule from the children of my neighborhood. The rest of my body is fleshy enough, but the legs are decidedly thin. Also please tell me of something that will cure big necks, as mine is growing larger and larger all the time. I have tried several things, but nothing seems to help it.

MR. M. W. S.

TO develop the calves rise on the toes as high as possible and then settle down to the standing position. Keep this up until the legs cramp. Then kick out this way and do all over again until you are tired. Do this several times a day and you will soon notice the change. Wheel riding will also develop the calves.

For the neck it would be safer for you to consult a physician, as you have tried simple remedies. If you have not done so you might try rubbing the affected part every night with camphorated oil, rubbing it gently.

To avoid him she leaped out of the window, striking on the sidewalk, receiving a severe scalp wound and possible fracture of the skull. Mrs. McDonald was removed to the Relief Hospital.

McDonald was locked up.

DEDICATE MEMORIAL TO SENATOR HEARST

Great Mining Building, Finest and Most Complete in World, Given to California University.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 24.—The great mining building on the campus of the University of California was dedicated to-day.

It was built by Mrs. Phoebe Hearst as a memorial to the late Senator George H. Hearst, and is the finest and most complete of its kind in the world. It seems destined to make the school of the mines of the university the most notable mining college in any land.

The dedicatory services were simple and impressive. They took place before a great concourse that filled all the seats and overflowed into the open campus and the groves.

In the throng were veteran educators, members of the faculty and students, who made a night throng in themselves, and with the mighty dead. Hundreds of women were in the crowd.

Loud Cheers for Little Boy.

The students were free with their applause for Mrs. Hearst, President Wheeler and William Randolph Hearst before the exercises began. But all their cheering was feeble compared to the shout that set up when they saw little George Randolph Hearst, who accompanied his father, William Randolph Hearst, to the platform, when the latter made the dedication address.

Mr. Hearst said:

"My friends: My mother has a great happiness, which I and George Randolph share in erecting this monument to the memory of George Hearst, and expressing in this memorial his connection with a great and valuable profession, and his interest in the University of California and in the State of California.

California as Sen. Hearst Found It.

"When George Hearst first came to California in 1850, the bare hills of Berkeley looked across the bay to the bare hills of San Francisco. The tents of San Francisco huddled to the water's edge. But soon the city grew and covered up all the hills.

"A year ago the hills were bare again, bare and black and desolate, and there were those who feared the future and doubted and despaired.

"But now in one short year the hills are once more covered with the turrited buildings of a mighty city—a proud, defiant city, which no catastrophe can conquer, which no disaster can discourage or destroy.

"It is a pleasant time to dedicate a building which a pioneer of the past offers to the generations which shall succeed him. It is a time which gratifies fully and completely the beautiful confidence which the pioneers of California had in the glorious future of this great State.

Praise for Pioneers.

"Founders of California were a strong and courageous race of men. They reached this country through difficulties and dangers; they wrested their fortunes from the rocks; they gained their knowledge in the hard school of experience.

"They loved the land of their adoption; they pictured its progress, dreamed of its developments, and all the time they builded strong and true the firm foundations of its greatness and prosperity.

"And all they did, they did for us, and all they gained, they gained to leave us; and institutions such as these are founded to make our paths of learning pleasant places and to transmit to us and to other generations yet to come the hard earned knowledge that these pioneers acquired.

Work for Present Generation.

"It is for us of the present generation, for you of the coming generations, to carry on to full fruition the noble work which the founders of California so well began. In the direction and prosecution of that work this great university will play a leading part, and if this institution dedicated to-day shall do its share and be of service, my mother will be richly rewarded.

"But, the young friends it is just as well to realize at the starting that a mining building does not make a mining engineer. Scientific cutting may be needed to develop the full brightness of a diamond, but no amount of cutting will make a pebble shine.

Success Destiny of California.

"Success is not hidden in these halls, but lies deep down within your hearts and souls, and with much labor must be dragged from there into the light and assayed in the fire, just as the precious metals must be dug from the earth's crust and smelted in the furnaces and wrought and made to be of value to mankind.

"My young friends, you can, and must, and will, succeed. Success is the destiny of California, the heritage transmitted from your sires.

"My mother rejoices in the opportunity to contribute something that will be of value to you in your careers, and we are proud to stand here to-day connected in some measure with the achievements on the part of George Hearst, to whom this building is dedicated, and with your achievements in the future, my young friends, to whom this is presented."

Description of Building.

Except in the centre of the front elevation, where Tuscan pillars support the arches of the entrance, the shop idea prevails everywhere in the structure. In this memorial front forceful giants, designed by Robert Aitken, share with figures representing the polite arts the burden of bearing up the roof.

But though the building is of steel and granite and concrete, there are representations of wooden rafters, to carry on the shop idea.

At the sides some of the windows carry out the idea of the chimneys that come from the sides of the furnaces.

Then, at the back, are the high windows that are intended to tell that within are housed the tall quartz mills.

Plans Secured in Famous Competition.

The cost of the building itself according to President Benjamin Ide Wheeler, has been about $550,000, and the equipment is to cost $50,000 more.

In the spending of the money the mining schools and colleges of the world have been investigated for their best ideas.

Professor Samuel R. Christy, dean of the College of Mining, and John Galen Howar, the university architect, were sent to visit the mining institutions in this country and Europe before the plans were made.

The structure is part of the great Hearst plan, secured by Mrs. Hearst in the world-famous competition, and the plan was adopted to practical uses by Architect Howard.

TELEGRAPHERS NOW FACE TEST OF ENDURANCE

President Small Denies Overtures of Peace Have Been Made by Strikers.

NOW RUSHES TO NEW YORK

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The telegraph strike here has settled down to a question of who can hold out the longest, the public being the sufferer.

The telegraph companies maintain a "there's-nothing-to-arbitrate" attitude, and the strikers remain firm in their determination that the companies shall grant them substantial concessions before they will return to work.

Despite the denial of the Western Union that they had been mailing important telegrams, Secretary Brooks, general superintendent, admits they have been forced to use the mail, but claim they were compelled to do that at times before the strike, owing to their inability to raise an office, or where an office closed early in the evening, but does not explain why they receive telegrams for offices that are closed.

Strike leaders here say they are perfectly satisfied with the progress of the strike, and say the men and women are a unit in their determination to resist any overtures on the part of the companies that will not guarantee them substantial benefits.

Reports received by strike leaders from all parts of the United States indicate that practically the same conditions prevail throughout the country.

In an interview, President Small said:

"I know of no proposition looking for a settlement at this time. The story coming from Washington of peace negotiations has no basis in fact. There is a chance of a compromise, but not at this time.

Mr. Small leaves Chicago to-day on the Twentieth Century Limited and will arrive here at 9:20 to-morrow. In the afternoon he will address a monster mass meeting at Everett Hall.

A strike of operators which it is claimed would practically tie up the whole system is threatened on the Long Island Railroad. The operators, who are not satisfied with the working conditions, have given the company until next Wednesday to grant their demands for improvements in their service. Unless the demand is heeded they say all the telegraphers will walk out.

NEW FEATURES IN BENEFIT SHOW FOR THE TELEGRAPHERS

Elsa Ryan is stirring up a big stir now, studying some new lines which she is going to spring on Monday night, when "The Green Bird" company, of which she is a principal, plays for the benefit of the striking telegraphers, at the Majestic Theatre. Tickets for the benefit performance on Monday evening are going like the proverbial hot cakes, for there is a steady line at the box office, and hundreds are buying their tickets from the telegraphers themselves. All tickets are at the regular theatre prices.

HISGEN WARMLY GREETED BY THE CHELSEA LEAGUE

Candidate for Independence League Nomination Pledged Cordial Support.

PROMISES RETURN VISIT

Thomas L. Hisgen of Springfield, candidate for the Independence League nomination for Governor, who for the past week has been touring the eastern part of the State addressing different meetings, varied his programme last night and instead of speaking met a number of Independence Leaguers at the Webster House, Chelsea, and talked over the leaves that would be brought up in the coming campaign. So deeply interested were those present in Mr. Hisgen that they insisted that he make another visit to Chelsea before the election, and while he had already made plans for nearly every night for weeks, he was urged so strongly that he finally agreed to double up a couple of the places on his visiting list and come to Chelsea again on the night of August 29. A committee of those present volunteered to secure a hall in the central part of the city, where Mr. Hisgen will address his listeners on the principles of the Independence League.

The Chelsea members assured the executive secretary of the Independence League, who was present, that they would send an enthusiastic delegation to the coming convention. During the evening remarks were made by several of the Chelsea Leaguers, and many valuable suggestions were offered.

Tired out after his strenuous week of campaigning, Mr. Hisgen asked to be excused from making any formal speech last evening, and simply met the Chelsea Leaguers in a heart to heart talk.

As Mr. Hisgen was preparing to leave for home the Chelsea leaders assured him that when he returned to that city on Thursday night he would be given one of the largest and most enthusiastic demonstrations that had ever been accorded a political candidate in Chelsea.

OCEAN LINES IN BIG RATE WAR

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—To-day sees the start of gigantic ocean rate war. The North German Lloyd steamship line is to announce a cut in its first cabin passenger transatlantic rate from $117.50 to $55. This rate will hold until October 31. This minimum rate is for the fast liner service, but it is said that reductions will also be made for passage on the slower vessels.

This cut follows closely upon rumors that the Cunard line would declare decided reductions with the advent of its new turbine steamships Lusitania.

The Hamburg-American line is expected to announce a new schedule.

The French line will also be involved in the rate competition.

SOUTH END GROUNDS, BOSTON, Aug. 24.—Shortly after the noon hour the weather conditions gave little prospect for he half holiday game between the Cubs and the Doves, as the field was pretty well drenched. There was just a chance of the clouds breaking away, and Manager Tenney was determined to play if it was possible to get out on the field and thereby avert a double-header on Monday.

When the visiting players got under way for the ground-rule drizzle which prevailed made it doubtful for a game, but not to be behind hand if the home team was anxious for a contest.

It was decided to hold off till the last minute before taking any decisive action in calling the game off, as the Summer showers were likely to be very uncertain and the word was sent around to be ready for the ball at the starting hour.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 24.—Gladdened by the victory over the Naps yesterday, the Boston team will go into to-day's game seeking another win with their best efforts.

Winter and Shaw was Manager McGuire's battery choice before the game. Lajoie announced that he would use Joss and Clark in an effort at retaliation.

McGuire is saving Taunehill for the battle with Detroit Monday, arranged while the team was in that city.

After the victory Manager McGuire and former Manager Unglaub spent the evening together at the latter's home on Superior street, McGuire's brother-in-law. The Boston boss and the dethroned boss seem great chums. They are room-mates on the road and their evenings are spent together.

Unglaub Omes Bearer.

Unglaub essayed the role of omes bearer yesterday, he says. Before the game he announced that he had dreamed in the night that he won a millionaire. After the victory he declared the dream the augury of the victory. He did not get between the sheets last night early enough to dream another lucky vision. He and McGuire were absent until the wee small hours.

Cy Young left for his home last night. When he returns to service in New York he expects to be addressed as "Papa" Young. That's why he went home. McGuire informed the rest of the boys with a smile.

Errors by Bradley and Clark were responsible for yesterday's victory for the Pilgrims over the Naps, 2 to 1.

Young Only Allowed Six Hits.

Rhodes held the Bostons down to four harmless hits but lost. Young only allowed the Indians six hits, three of which came in the first inning, when the locals scored their lone run.

It was the first time that the Cleveland fans have had an opportunity to see the rejuvenated Bostons in action, and they were more than pleased with the showing. While Boston was playing the game all the time, backing up superb pitching on the part of Young, the Naps were also doing themselves proud, with the exception of the three errors, all figuring in the run scoring, while the only misplays of the visitors did not even make it promising for the Naps.

There were several brilliant pieces of fielding, in which Wagner, Stovall and Lajoie were the principal actors, the Boston shortstop having no less than ten chances in the first four innings and accepting nine of them.

Young was at his best, owing to the dark day, and he would end up the game by fanning Lajoie and Clark in succession in the ninth inning, showing that he has still a few more years in the baseball harness.

FEW OUTFIELDERS ARE FIRST-CLASS THROWERS

One of the practical and most important departments of baseball play—that of throwing—has undergone some curious and interesting changes in the past fifteen years. During that period infield throwing has improved to an extent which can only be appreciated by a first baseman who has taken the quick passes from third and short ever since the Brotherhood days. At the same time outfield throwing has declined from first class off to an amazing degree. Fewer runners now circle the infield on wild throws than in the olden day, and as a sort of compensation fewer runners are nipped at the plate or between the bases by long throws from the gardeners. A fifteen years ago there was seldom a game without at least one skyscraping chief by a shortstop and baseman—a high toss which sailed far above first base and brought up somewhere near the stand, while the runner jogged giddily round, secure in the knowledge of the range and distance to a certainty. They snap up ball after ball and send them across true as a die, right into the expectant hands, and even their wildest efforts seldom pass the baseman's hands. Nearly every infielder in either big league team has acquired a clean-cut and accurate throw, and it is seldom indeed that a runner can get as far as second on an errant pass to first.

dom stopping short of third. Just to balance this and keep the equation even there was also at least one daisy-cutting shot which the first baseman couldn't have secured with a scoop-shovel, a China soup ladle or a pair of tongs, and even their wildest efforts seldom pass the baseman's hands. Nearly every infielder in either big league team has acquired a clean-cut and accurate throw, and it is seldom indeed that a runner can get as far as second on an errant pass to first.

News of the Boxers.

Philadelphia will be a haven for boxers this Winter as there are likely to be a number of good clubs there with one another for patronage.

The fight fans in Los Angeles have designs on getting Gunner Moir, the English pugilist now in California. There is no doubt but that Moir would pack up and start for this country to-morrow, but the Queen's subject is under the Pacific Athletic Club, and does not seem to think that he can do better than to remain with the club for the present. Their contract terminates in November, and Moir is anxious to come over to this side for some time to come.

Those who saw the six-round bout between Tommy Murphy of Harlem and Jack Blackburn recently would like to see the same pair look to once again. It was the opinion of many in the crowd after the fight that it was one of the best battles they had seen in a long time. There is no doubt that they will be seen at it again before long.

Winter and Shaw were also at Los Angeles when Jeffries was there, but they failed to think that Jeffries would be a good man to tackle. Moir would pack up and start for this country to-morrow, but they have designs on getting on the Pacific Athletic Club, and do not seem to think that Jeffries will be a good man to tackle. Moir is certainly in fine condition, and seemingly will not have any trouble in securing matches if he will stay on this side for some time to come.

TEMPLE AT HARD WORK FOR BATTLE

More than a hundred boxing enthusiasts that are members of the Winnisimmet Athletic Club, assembled in the gymnasium of the club yesterday afternoon to get a line on the condition of Larry Temple, who is to meet Sam Langford in Chelsea next Tuesday night. They sent away satisfied that more trouble is in store for Langford then he has encountered for many a day.

Temple was speedy yesterday, and in the six-round bout that he engaged with Charlie Hagber, the Lowell heavyweight, who is training in Chelsea for his bout in Rumford Falls with Fred Bradley, Larry demonstrated that his physical condition is flawless. After working with Hagber he went through six fast rounds with Kid Morris, who was welterweight champion of the United States Navy a short time ago.

Long runs over the country roads and along Revere Beach are stunts that Temple engages in every morning. He is a hard worker, and is one of the most punctual boxers that has ever been seen in this section in regard to toiling time. He begins to get busy at six in the morning and winds up his work for the day shortly after five in the afternoon, after his supper he devotes his time to short walks; then retires to the clubhouse, where he plays several games of pool, and at nine o'clock he promptly retires.

Young Curtis, who is to meet George Dennis in the semi-final, is training with Jimmy Walsh. The fans will see a revelation in this bantam.

BOWERMAN BADLY INJURED

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Catcher Frank Bowerman, of the Giants, was so badly injured by a pitched ball in the double header which the Pirates won here yesterday, it was said at the hospital to-day that his chances of recovery are slim. Bowerman was hit on the temple by Camnitz in the second inning of the second game, but owing to the large swelling caused by the blow, it has not been determined whether or not he has fractured his skull.

PILGRIMS TO BATTLE DOVES

On Monday, October 7, at the South End grounds, the Pilgrims and the Doves will clash in a series of nine games for the championship of the city, which is at present held by the Americans, and the second game will be held at the Huntington avenue grounds the next day and so on until the end.

CIRCUIT RACERS NEXT WEEK AT PROVIDENCE

"Ahoy for Providence!" is the watchword of the boys that have spent the week entertaining the patrons of the Readville track.

And let it be said the racing furnished was particularly good, not a day but that the Breeders' Association had feature events, and often times a couple of them. Such sport is bound to bring the racing of harness horses to the paying basis it occupied in the days of speculation, and entirely through gate receipts.

It was a queer thing that the only two defeats suffered by Ardelle occurred at the Readville track, and both times her conqueror was the gelding Argot Boy. Cox certainly does fine by her in a clever race. He is now right in form.

Another invincible of the season to take a back seat was the trotting mare Lillian M., that George W. Crockett drove. She had spent everything before her down the circuit till reaching here.

W. J. Burke, Jr., owner of George G., came over from New York to see his gelding, and had a delegation of New Yorkers with him. When it came to racing, however, the son of Homewood held his field cheaply.

Close Racing in 2:16 Trot.

In the second heat of the 2:16 trot none except the judges could determine how four of the contestants finished outside of the winner, Henry S. Jr., so closely were they aligned across the track. The officials saw Travelmore second, Composer third, Prinche Fourth and Prince C. fifth, while the other starter, Queen's Daughter had her head right at Composer's sulky wheel. It was the best finish of the meeting.

Byron Kay is quite a pacer, but in a couple of the dual drives in the home stretch it looked like the field had some sleepers poking along to get the right odds next week at Providence. If Millie Sayles deserved punishment for not trying with Baron May, then the judges should have had their eyes on other drivers in the 2:14 pace, and this does not refer to Mellvary, who tried for his life with Gentry's Star.

One of the visitors at the meeting was Secretary Horace W. Wilson of the Lexington, Ky., track. He reports his meeting is coming along tip top, and on dount will have the banner three-year-old futurity race of the whole season when the youngsters strike his town.

Another that received the hand shakes from numerous friends was Uncle Jack Bowen. It was his initial appearance in a Grand Circuit meet this year. He is looking well and hearty.

Henry S., Jr., for Show Horse.

By the way, Henry S., Jr., will make a star high actor when his racing days have passed. Several on the watch for show horses covered his gait and conformation as a tan bark performer.

J. M. Johnson, president of the Breeders' Association, owned a yearling on the track, sired by Todd, that took everybody's breath away. He could step it off fast enough for one of his age, and looked developed for a two-year-old.

Cascade must have felt as though he was in the case once more, as a number of years ago he was trained over the Readville track by Jack Wall, and won several races there.

The third quarter of the 2:04 pace was reeled off in :29½ in the opening heat. Phalia and Argot Boy having locked wheels for the lead, and the latter barely nosed out the mare at the wire in a hard drive.

It was announced from the judges' stand that on Labor Day the Dorchester and Lynn Driving clubs are to hold an interscity matinee at Combination Park, and that sixteen races have been arranged, eight of the number being two-horse dash fairs and the remainder to have four horses for starters.

24-HOUR AUTO RACE WILL OPEN MORRIS PARK TRACK

NEW YORK, Aug. 24—The Morris Park Motordrome Club has announced the program for the race meet which is to be held on September 6-7 at Morris Park. This includes a twenty-four hour relay race, which will be started at 8 o'clock Friday evening; a fifty-mile race for stripped touring cars or runabouts; the National Flexibility Trials for the Winthrop E. Scarritt Cup, which will consist of a mile at top speed, followed by a mile at slow pace, points to be credited to those which make the best performance on each mile without changing from their high-speed gear; an owner's driving contest at forty-five miles for fully equipped cars; a series of trade races, in which manufacturers or dealers may organize their own fields of cars, of their own make, under their own colors, and a dealer's run-about selling handicap, in which the entrant may select the car or any two he chooses, receiving a price handicap or one second for each $100, the winning car to be offered for sale at auction at the completion of the race; gymkhana games and an amusing series of trials for the mile record by various drivers.

The relay system of running the twenty-four-hour race may prove interesting to the public, but judging from the results of previous efforts of the kind held in the West, it is the cause of more trouble for the promoters of the race, and in the end I believe that a straight race would not only be more interesting, but far more satisfactory to the contestants.

Work is being pushed forward steadily on the track, which is now being watered and rolled, extra banking placed on the clubhouse curve. It will be all first finished to shavings the track to an exact mile and a quarter, but it was found impossible to do so without injuring the compact surface now existing in the inner half of the infield. This improvement will be put in for next year's racing. In the motordrome the performances will be computed by laps, each lap being 1.20 miles.

* * *

However some people may view the attacks on the intensity record between Chicago and this city, it does not tend to favor in the eyes of many motorists, including Winthrop E. Scarritt, a member of the Committee on Public Safety and a former president of the Automobile Club of America, who said: "This burning up the roads and public highways by motorists in search of intensity records, is absolutely wrong and to willful a premeditated violation of the law. It not only violates the letter but the spirit of the law in every State they pass through. It is not only bad for the industry, but it is bad for the sport. Intensity records mean bad from every other standpoint. The worst of these attempts is that they show that those who make them, try to make capital out of their performances by their namelessness. Hanover, N. H.

Notes of the Diamond

Ty Cobb of the Tigers has the rest of the outfielders talked to a standstill in batting seven assists, leaders figuring in twelve double plays.

* * *

The Pirates have gone against Pat Flaherty, their old batting star, three times this season on visits to Boston. They finished a bad second on four of those occasions, and three of the games were lost games now.

* * *

The feats cannot understand why Connie Mack let Coakley go, but then almost any kind of a pitcher look to good to Connie.

* * *

John Titus says that he feels his days are not many with the big leagues. Since Beckley left he is the only man that Clarke has time to a watching or any other sort of face trimmings.

* * *

Beebe, Mathewson and Overall are the premier strikeout pitchers of the National League. The first has fanned 156 in twenty-three games and Overall 101 in twenty-two games.

* * *

It developed in the course of a fan fest the other day that Connie Mack has never seen Hans Wagner in action. Let us see how many more of the old order of infielders without being familiar with the standard.

* * *

Magee, of the Phillies, is giving Hans Wagner a hard run only for the reason that he is not within the real leadership in league batting. He is still quite a few points behind the star shortstop, but he is coming fast, and Wagner has only a lead of twenty-six points.

* * *

Cincinnati leads the league in club batting, and Chicago is fourth, which again shows that batting is not the only requisite in the present system of keeping baseball figures. It is a fact, however, that this means that Cincinnati is a better hitting team than the Cubs, and that is the way it comes down to the head.

* * *

Campbell, a player of the Sioux City club, will not be disciplined with any demands for his services next season, in a report from that city, because he literally knocked the cover off the ball, and that is the kind of men we like to see.

* * *

The batting order of the Boston Americans is the same as the famous White Stockings of 1885. The resemblance ceases there, for the latter were a powerful team.

* * *

An exchange remarks that team play is important, also where there is weak umpiring. This is some good dope, and is more in point than the remark of the fellow of the "think work" we were prominent this Spring.

* * *

The Detroit papers and officials are straining themselves to say all the nice things they can about Ty Cobb, their wonderful young outfielder. Well, until he proves to people that he is worth the figure in his contract is about $2,000 too small for him.

* * *

We would like to see Walter Johnson, the new Washington star, pitch two innings to Ty Cobb and Joe Wedell. Later it was decided that you could not tell him from Cy Young in the box, and that Jack Warner says that he looks and pitches enough like Matthewson to be his brother.

* * *

Manager McAleer has roped out Pitchers Farrell, Criss, Graham and Keith for next season, and is expected to have the first three under contract by the time the season is over. The latter is one of the best of balls so hard in a game against the giants down South last Spring that Sam Crane is still talking about it.

* * *

To avoid being drafted this Winter Jesse Burkett, Pittsburgher and owner of the St. Louis franchise will release himself unconditionally before the drafting season ends. He can be in no better position and will sign with some other team.

* * *

Although Jack Coombs, of the Tigers, is not only the leading pitcher of the American League, but he has a better record than any other pitcher in either organization. When the last figures were compiled two fifties stood out, Coombs with the nearest rival being Miner Brown, with seventeen less and four less.

* * *

Before getting sore at Umpire Sheridan for firing a man off the field at the Polo Grounds, it should be laughed at if the thief strike called on him, remember that Sheridan was the only umpire in transit than the worst thing that McGraw ever said to an umpire.

* * *

Stating that he could not enter a vacation in a better way than touring the Eastern States, Clark Griffith, manager of the Washington Nationals, left Chicago, that he could visit his home in Missouri, on his way to his home and to tour four Southern cities where the Nationals will play.

Nothing New About the "Holy Jumpers"

Half Savage Man Mistakes Motions for Religion

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

A collection of well-meaning, simple-minded creatures known as "The Holy Jumpers," the same that lately invaded Boston, now propose to move upon New York, locate in Broadway, and convert sinners just in time.

These good people relieve their nerves to very the monotony of life, and innocently believe that they are climbing up to Heaven, by jumping and dancing violently in their religious worship.

Old and young men and women, some fat, some thin, all pitifully earnest, jump and squat and dance until they are exhausted, and then, breathing heavily, congratulate one another upon the fact that they have driven out the devil.

Having felt a good deal, in their primitive animal way, and having read little or nothing, these innocent individuals believe that they have discovered a new idea.

Their new idea—the expression of religious enthusiasm by jumping and other violent physical efforts—is, however, one of the oldest and most interesting phenomena in our short human history.

We human beings are just in our babyhood. And, like babies, we are incapable of expressing our deepest feelings. You have seen babies and even grown men of childish temperament, clench fists, twist up faces, shake and screech with swelling blood vessels—signs of anger more powerful than words.

Human nature of the lower kind demands PHYSICAL expression for every feeling that it has.

The "Holy Jumpers," who feel an emotion which they conceive to be religion or adoration of Omnipotence, cannot possibly express in words what they feel. AND SO THEY JUMP.

Go to the Zoological Gardens where the big macaque or rhesus monkey is imprisoned. Offer him a peanut, pull it away as he reaches for it, and you will see a very good, angry imitation of a "Holy Jumper."

He will keep his front legs on the ground, and dance up and down violently with his hind legs. His feelings are too deep for utterance.

Many of the most blood-curdling Indian dances are simply religious dances—that is THEIR holy jumping.

The admirable, virtuous and law-abiding Shakers of olden times were our early Holy Jumpers. They, too, jumped, feeling more than they could express in words or thoughts.

You may see in India a very earnest leather-faced old man, with masses of jewelry piled up around him in the shape of offerings, sitting on sharp nails. This is "the holy man" (no pun) of Benares. When he gets tired of sitting on the nails, an old woman comes and sits on them. They take turns all night long and all day. Or they SAY they do. THAT IS THEIR KIND OF HOLY JUMPING. And the admiring souls who think that nails OUGHT to be sat upon by somebody, but who wouldn't like to do it themselves, are very glad to contribute at the altar, and have somebody sit on the nails for them.

In the Middle Ages, when we northern people, recently come in contact with old civilizations, were mere religious savages, there were all kinds of "Holy Jumping." Some of the poor creatures relieved their religious enthusiasm by lashing themselves and each other with dreadful whips. Others starved themselves. Others refused to wash, as though filth might please the Creator of the oceans. Others burned scientific books, to please the Creator of knowledge. They all MEANT well, but they hadn't the brain or the power to give expression to the dull feeling of reverence within them, and so their minds took revenge upon their poor bodies, like an idiot biting his wrist.

You can find these things to-day, if you go to Russia, a country where there are millions of human beings as savage and wild as were OUR ancestors seven hundred years ago.

You will find in Russia an old man trying to please the merciful, wonderful power that created the universe by dressing himself as follows:

"Under the shrivelled touloupe or sheepskin coat, which he obviously never took off, he wore two stone slabs hung on iron chains, one in front, the other at his back. He had an iron cap on his head, round his loins an iron belt, somewhat like a hoop, to which was riveted a large ring."

The poor creature thus mortifying the marvelous body given to him for useful work took no sleep except suspended by the iron belt around his waist from a ring in the ceiling.

These pitiful, dull, well-meaning, pathetic "Holy Jumpers" are interesting and valuable, for they are distant milestones—their place is centuries back in time. They show us how far that which we are pleased to call "civilization" has progressed. The American "Holy Jumper," with his pancakes, his ham and eggs and his platitudinous sermons, is a feeble imitation of the real religious enthusiast.

If you would know how this physical madness, seeking to express the religious feeling that overpowers a feeble mind, influences its victims, read about those in Russia, devotees of "the Red Death," that to spite the Czar burn themselves alive in crowds, shut up in barns.

Or read this description by Dmitri Merejkowski of the Holy Jumpers as they exist in Russia now:

"Suddenly a venerable old man started from his seat; his ascetic face resembled Holy Sergius, as he is painted on icons; he ran out into the middle of the room and began to whirl around.

"Then a young girl, about fourteen, quite a child, slender as a reed, with a neck long as the stalk of a flower, also started up and went round with the grace of a swan.

"'That is Marioushka, the idiot,' said Yemelian, pointing to her. 'She can hardly speak, mostly low, but when filled with the spirit she sings like a nightingale.'

"The girl sang in a childlike, silvery voice:

"'Tis enough for you to sit,
Time has come for the birds to flit
From prison and cells
And shadowy caverns'——

"Her waving arms suggested wings. "Then Paramonitich ran up to Marioushka, took her by the hands and began to whirl her round and round, like a polar bear dancing with a snow fairy. Tichon would have never believed that this huge, portly body could dance with such ethereal lightness, spinning round like a top, he sang in a high-pitched voice.

"Other people rose and began to spin round.

"A man with a wooden leg went round as nimbly as the rest. Tichon was told afterward that his name was Captain Smoorigin; he lost his leg at the storming of Arov.

"A short, fat lady with dignified gray curls, Princess Khovansky, spun round like a ball. Next to her a loose-limbed cobbler was prancing, throwing his feet and arms about; he twisted and twirled himself like a huge gnat, a 'daddy-long-legs,' ejaculating from time to time:

"'By this time nearly all had joined the dance, not only singly, but in pairs and groups, representing the 'engineers,' 'crosses,' 'David's ship,' 'flowers,' etc.

"'The various figures,' explained Yemelian to Tichon, 'represent the dances of the heavenly hosts of angels and archangels round the throne of God; the waving of arms imitates the beating of angels' wings. The heavens and the earth are one; what happens there is enacted here also.

"'The dance grew more and more rapid; it seemed as though a whirlwind filled the room, and they were no longer dancing themselves, but some external power was whirling them round with such rapidity that their faces could no longer be discerned; the hair on the head stood upright, the tunics blew out like funnels, and the men were transformed into white spinning columns. Some hissed, others cackled, others again screamed in frenzy, and again it seemed that it was not they themselves, but some external power that was screaming through their mouths.

"'He has filled us, He has filled us, Holy, Holy Spirit,
Fill us, fill us, fill us!'

"They fell on the ground in convulsions, with foaming mouths, like madmen; they prophesied, but for the most part it was impossible to make out what they meant. Some stopped short in exhaustion, their faces either crimson or deadly white. Sweat poured down in streams; they mopped themselves with towels, wrung their drenched tunics out, making pools on the floor. After a brief rest they recommenced their dance."

---

The world is coming out of such "religion." The self-torturing religion of the Indian gashing his body, the physical madness of the dancing monkey or the whirling dervish are dying out gradually. As a race we are backward, but here and there you do see upon the earth a man silent standing in the night, looking at the stars, humbly anxious to obey the Divine order that is written in the wonderful harmony of this universe, realizing that his duty is to establish peace, order, law on this poor earth, as they exist above in the wonderful heavens.

The selfish, insane, self-torturing religious maniac is already replaced here and there by the man pitiful, kind-hearted, caring more for the suffering souls of others than for his own wretched little soul.

We are advancing toward truer religion, toward the religion that Christ taught, when He put the poor woman with her small gift above the richest, when He singled out the children as objects of His [illegible] affection, made poor [illegible] His friends and told ALL men that they should act toward one another as brothers.

She Cites Knowledge of Money Values as the Third of the Desirable Qualities in a Wife

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

AFTER cheerful affection, order and neatness, an idea of the value of money comes next in the good qualities of a wife.

I do not like the word "economy," because it is so often used to excuse parsimony and stinginess.

An extravagant man or woman is preferable to a miserly one. The extravagant nature frequently possesses admirable qualities in connection with extravagance; but the miserly nature is wholly despicable.

The Miserly Woman

THE woman who is miserly in the use of money may save for her husband and help him to become a millionaire, but she will be incapable of giving him love in abundance or of making him proud of his home; for the miserly propensities in her nature will continually crop out and bring humiliations upon him.

Such a wife frequently ends her life as the deserted and divorced woman who makes way for a more showy and attractive substitute. The miserly "close" nature is miserly and "close" in affection as well as money.

The miserly woman forgets feminine pride and grows rusty and old fashioned in her dress and personal appearance in order to save money for another woman to enjoy.

And always she prides herself upon what she believes is the great virtue of "economy" and wonders she is not appreciated.

Therefore, the quality I believe to be one of the three cardinal virtues in a wife I call knowledge of money values.

True Economy

WHEN a woman realizes that money has no value save as it gives comfort and pleasure to the largest number of people and that a wasteful use of it is wicked and selfish she is not inclined to become either extravagant or miserly.

Such a woman thinks before she buys; she is not attracted by mere bargain-counter allurements to purchase trash which has no value for herself or others.

She makes a careful study of the needs of her household before she buys supplies of any kind, and then she makes a careful study of market prices and knows whether she is paying the real or the fictitious value of what she purchases.

Such a woman will make her home a dream of beauty, and herself and her children will always be charmingly attired on the same amount of money which the thoughtlessly extravagant woman spends for trash alone—things which have been purchased haphazard, at bargain counters, merely because they were "cheap," and which serve no purpose in beautifying the home or the persons of its inhabitants.

Lessons in Marketing

THE best possible way for a woman to learn money values is to be given a certain sum of money, however small, by her parents when she reaches the age of twelve or fourteen, and to learn how to make her own purchases of small necessities.

Naturally at that age a child needs direction and guidance; but in two or three years' time she learns how to shop and how to market to the best advantage on a small income.

Woman has so long been in the position of a slave or beggar in money matters that it is not surprising if she is often at a loss to know how best to use money; but every wife should be given her allowance and assisted by wise and considerate counsel until she learns the value of money, if she does not possess this knowledge in the beginning.

If she does, then indeed she goes to her husband well dowered.

A Monarch Overthrown

By James J. Montague

'A warrant has been issued for a Pittsburg baby, who is to be arrested for tearing up a lawn.—News Item.

HO! You little autocrat! Beneath your tyrant spell
You've kept us grown-ups cowering, and dared us to rebel.
When we have thought to raise a voice against your sovereign will
You lifted up your royal wail and we grew tamed and still.
But even worms will turn at last. Oppression's ways pursue,
And we will soon be up in arms, proud babe, as well as you!

HEREAFTER, when your storm command shall hale us out of bed
And order us to pace the floor with you till night has fled,
We'll swear a warrant out for you, and soon you'll stand in awe
Of that protector of the weak, the high, majestic law.
The rock pile for some thirty days your haughty mien may curb,
And you'll be rather slow next time our slumbers to disturb.

AND when, in harsh, unreasoning wrath, you order that the moon
Be placed within your tiny hand, and placed there swift and soon,
When explanation and excuse alike have no avail,
When all distractions go for naught and substitutions fail,
If we appear before a court and you are promptly fined,
Perhaps again you will not be so pleased to make us mind.

AND ah! The costly toys you blight, the precious things you spoil,
Destruction-dealing, reckless mite, who neither spin nor toil,
Henceforth, when you have wrecked a watch with one judicious blow,
We will not murmur, mournfully: "No matter. Let it go!"
For we have shaken off your yoke, and, growing free and bold,
We'll crush you as our fathers crushed the monarchies of old.

OBJECTS TO PAYING FIFTY CENTS A MONTH FOR STORING A GAS METER

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I am only a small gas consumer, and in the Summer time I do not use any, but I do want to use it from October 1 to May 1 almost every evening. Consequently, I do not want to have my meter taken away. As I note that your paper is a pretty good hand to look into things, I suggest that the extortionate charge of fifty cents a month for use of gas meters by the Boston Gas Company is a good thing to investigate. I should like to know if the State Gas Commissioners have sanctioned the charge. If so, a petition to the Governor and council is in order for their removal.
